More than 10 years ago, Catherine "Cat" Anne Lewis '92 found herself in one short-term relationship after another. "I wanted to get married and have a fulfilling relationship, have children with a real partner," she recalls. "It was an unhappy time for me."

On May 5, 1998, Cat took a pledge of premarital chastity. So began the concept of the Reborn Virgin®. The 1992 graduate of the dental hygiene program hasn't looked back.

Last year, she wrote and published a book called, Reborn Virgin Women, If You Wanna Be Happy, Keep Your Pants Zipped. She details exactly how she re-approached the dating world with a vow of celibacy until she was married.

"If you don't have anything besides sex in your relationship, it just isn't going to last," she says. "You see it played out in Hollywood every couple of years. Relationships can't survive without friendship, commitment and trust."

Ultimately, that's what Cat found with her husband of seven years, Howard Lewis. "Now he wants to write the Reborn Virgin book for men!" she jokes.

Cat describes her time at NHTI as one where she bonded with many of her classmates. "I had received my bachelor's degree prior to attending NHTI," she says. "The course work was just as rigorous as my previous studies and the faculty at NHTI was top notch."

Mystery on the Water

In 2007, John Healy '69 saw a lifelong dream become a reality when he published his first novel, Cold Dark Water. "I'm one of these people who think every single person has a book inside of us. But it wasn't until I took an online creative writing course at NHTI that I realized I really could do it," says John, who graduated from the electrical engineering technology program.

Cold Dark Water is a fictional novel set in Portsmouth. It tells the tale of the connection between an 1813 shipwreck and a double murder in 1873 at the Isles of Shoals. As a retired NH State Police Lieutenant and current private investigator, John brings his many years of law enforcement experience to his novel. John's wife of 31 years, Muriel, edited the book – and came up with the title.

John says, "Today NHTI truly holds a special place in my heart. It's where I got my start in life...I graduated in 1969. My daughter Melissa is a current student. And the creative writing course I took four years ago changed my life. The course laid out what you truly need to know to write a good book."

New Academic Programs Generate Lots of Excitement

It's Not All Fun and Games

In fact, it's a lot of math, but that doesn't stop students interested in the Animation and Graphic Game Programming (AGGP). Launched with 30 students last year, it has grown to 80 students and will graduate its first class this spring. A recently-forged agreement between NHTI and SNHU ensures graduates a smooth path toward a Bachelor's degree in this rewarding $10 billion industry.

Now Picture This . . .

Our fledgling Visual Arts (VA) program now has about 400 students. It's a huge hit with students from across all majors. Classes are taught at the nearby Kimball-Jenkins School of Art where a recent student art show drew hundreds of visitors.

What's In A Name?

NHTI remains Concord's Community College

After 42 years of calling itself New Hampshire Technical Institute—often affectionately dubbed “The Tech”—and after recent legislation establishing the Community College System of New Hampshire (previously the New Hampshire Community Technical College System), the College has been pondering whether the time had come to change the name to reflect the broader mission we now serve.

When NHTI first opened in 1965, it had one classroom building and one residence hall, with a statewide mission to educate students in engineering technologies. Through the decades we've added programs in health, business, computer, education, and justice/legal studies, all leading to career and transfer opportunities. We continue to have highly technical programs; however, the programs that have grown the most are in Liberal Arts and General Studies. The new Visual Arts program, for instance, has swelled in one year to 400 students taking arts courses.

In short, the College is an affordable choice for students of all ages to join an exceptional community of learners for transfer, for joining the workforce, and for enrichment.

Looking to the Future

With this expanded mission, NHTI conducted an extensive inquiry entitled, “What's in a Name?” We reached out to more 8,000 alumni by web survey, polled the campus, and gathered input from the Advisory Board, leadership team and community focus groups. We also surveyed high school students and guidance counselors. The response varied widely, with a clear division among those who wanted to retain the name and those who wanted to change.

For the other community colleges in the system, the choice was clear: being called the NH Community Technical College at (name the town) was not a good option. The time was ripe for a change.

For NHTI the choice was more problematic. We have always served a statewide resident population, have maintained a constant name for over 40 years, have offered transferable programs, and have invested in branding the moniker NHTI, Concord's Community College. Though larger and more expansive than ever, NHTI has always operated as a community college.

After many rounds of deliberation, the Advisory Board voted unanimously to recommend that NHTI retain its name, with emphasis on the acronym NHTI. The leadership team agreed. We concluded that it would be unsound to abandon the name that has so successfully served this wonderful college, known for its excellence.

So, “What's in a Name?” In the case of NHTI, there is a tapestry of richness: generations of tradition, countless stories of professional and personal success, a history of innovation and growth, many fond memories of those who came before us and promising futures for those who follow.

NHTI is, and always has been, Concord's Community College, an exceptional community of learners.

Frechette '97 joins NH LEND

Amy Frechette has joined the MCH-LEND (Maternal & Child Health-Leadership Education in Neurodevelopmental and Related Disabilities) program at UNH.

Amy and her Pomeranian, Eden.

Amy completed the NH Leadership series in 2007 and co-taught the COMM 920 ASD Seminar with Dr. Rae M. Sonnenmeier at UNH last fall. She is also a member of the NH Commission on Autism Spectrum Disorders, a board member of the Autism Society of NH, and has participated in the annual Autism Summer Institute sponsored by the Institute On Disability (IOD).

Amy has an autism service dog, Eden, a pomeranian. Eden is 6 years old and is the official mascot for ASNH (Autism Society of NH).

“He goes everywhere with me and was listed on the course syllabus as an instructor,” she laughs. She also has two older brothers, Amos and Sidney. “I may not be a human parent, but certainly a parent to Amos, Eden and Sidney!”

Old Timers Fall to Young Hoopsters

NHNTI alumni hoopsters took on the 2007-08 men's Capitals team in a clash of youth, strength and speed vs. maturity, experience and cunning. Not surprisingly, youth, strength and speed won out in a 114-110 double OT barn burner!

It was a very close, back and forth contest, but in the end the current Capitals had too much winder for their elder brethren in this soon-to-be-classic annual matchup.

Former NHTI All-American Chris "Speedy" Lawes led the alumni team with 34 points. The alumni team also featured Jay "The Mayor" Atton, Kenny Ouellette, Travis Labrie, Leon Grant, George Whitehead, Marcus Cuse, Zach Hall, Steve Caccia, and Dave Berkland. Pacing the current Capitals were Stephan Roberts (Orlando, Fla.) and Peter Darby (Laconia) with 24 and 25 points, respectively.

Following the game a reception filled with food, laughs, and memories were enjoyed by all of the players, old and new, fresh and tired. Special thanks to the NHTI Alumni Club for sponsoring photos and snacks. Want to participate in next year's clash? Send your contact info to NHTI Athletic Director Paul Hogan at phogan@ccsnh.edu.

Ex NHTI Hoopster's Still MVP!

George Whitehead '98 graduated from NHTI's General Studies program and the basketball team 10 years ago, but the 6'5" former power forward from Virginia is still roaming the hardwood floors.

George is living in Nashua with his beautiful wife, Jenn, and three young boys, Jaylen George, Khari George and George III. But he finds time to hit the court for a few friendly hoops. "I'm still playing from time to time," he says. "Just staying in shape."

Occasionally, he returns to his hometown in Franklin, Virginia, for a traditional community block party. "Everyone is invited to come and have a good time," he says.

The block party includes what has become a very competitive basketball tournament. "Well last year my team won the whole thing and I was crowned MVP," he says sheepishly. "I was very, very shocked. Teams from all over the state and North Carolina came out to play. I was looking forward to going back to defend it this year but . . ."

You're more likely to find George doing father things with his boys. "Going to the park, playing ball, video games," he says. "Everything that daddies love to do with their sons."

George is a Design Center Manager/Project Designer at GV Moore Lumber Co. overseeing the kitchen and millwork departments. "I will not be going to Virginia this year to defend my title because I'll be working on my current project at work which I love," he says.

George stays in touch with NHTI. "I owe a lot to this school," he reflects. "NHTI gave me a second chance at life."

O'Callaghan '07 continues his activism in the Pacific

The endless winter of 2007-08 hasn't been a problem for Ryan O'Callaghan, a 2007 graduate of the Criminal Justice program. He enjoyed some skiing on his vacation here, but otherwise is basking in the sun and surf of Hawaii.

Ryan is attending Hawai'i Pacific University (HPU), in Honolulu, on the island of Oah'u, after earning a Phi Theta Kappa academic scholarship for 50% tuition. A faithful and active member of the Recycling Club (now the Environmental Action Club) while at NHTI, Ryan single handedly organized efforts to re-paint the Fort Eddy underpass of I-393 last May, according to club advisor Ruth Heath. He has continued his activism in the Pacific.

"At HPU, there are many clubs related to the environment: Club Green, Sustainability Club, Recycling club, Nature club, etc.," says Ryan. "People are very concerned about recycling. They have many local recycling posts around the city of Honolulu, and they have signs (even on the buses) instructing people how to recycle!"

Ryan is studying Justice Administration and was able to transfer his NHTI credits to HPU, so he expects to complete his BA in 2 years. "I am probably going to apply with the Honolulu Police Department sometime next spring," says Ryan.

Ryan has four part times jobs outside of school. He is working as a resident assistant at Kalo Terrace - an off campus housing unit, a lifeguard in Honolulu at the YWCA, a water safety instructor in Honolulu, at the YWCA, and also as a student aid with Student Life and First Year programs at Hawaii Pacific University. He is currently sponsoring HPU for the Phi Theta Kappa scholarship which he received, and has a current cumulative GPA of 3.76.

Back to School

Belliveau '97 upgrades her management skills

When Kathy Belliveau took her new job as a team leader in the Diagnostic Services department at Concord Hospital, she was a bit apprehensive. "I had been in an office environment for over 20 years, but never in a leadership position," she says.

She needed NHTI to upgrade her management skills—and quickly. Her supervisor suggested the Front Line Management course offered by NHTI's Business Training Center, a familiar environment for the 1997 graduate of the Dental Assisting program at NHTI.

The results exceeded her expectations. "I learned so much," says Kathy. "How to interview people; how to evaluate new employees during their trial period; and how to get the people you have to work together."

"We had a class of about 12, from many different backgrounds. There was one man whose business was digging wells!" she says. "But the material was applicable to all types of businesses, and we learned an important lesson in team-building: that everyone's viewpoint is valuable."

"The professors really want to see your business succeed, and they give you the tools to do that. I learned more from this class than I have from some national conferences—and at a much lower cost. I highly recommend it . . . in fact, I already have!"
