Chris Clement is a man who doesn’t shy away from his history. In fact, he embraces it.

“I was a food stamps and welfare kid who grew up in the Somersworth Housing Project,” he tells a packed audience at a recent luncheon hosted by the Greater Concord Chamber of Commerce. “It is possible to get out. It is possible to succeed!”

Chris says education (including a degree in Mechanical Engineering Technology from NHTI in 1988) paved the way for the transition from “welfare kid” to Commissioner of the NH Department of Transportation, overseeing a $700 million budget and 1,600 employees responsible for the upkeep of 4,559 miles of State roadways.

“I never met my father so my mom raised 6 kids by herself,” Chris explains. “She worked hard, and taught us to do the same.”

4 Degrees, 4 New Hampshire Schools

A straight-C student at Somersworth High School, Chris questioned his readiness for college when he graduated in 1984. But he had the drive and the courage to try. Seeing some of his older high school friends do well at the New Hampshire Vocational Technical College at Stratham (now Great Bay Community College), he applied. In 1986, he earned an associate’s degree in machine tool processing. He went to work in the machine tool shop at G.S. Henschel in Newburyport, Mass. and caught a glimpse of the next step on his path.

“G.S. Henschel manufactures parts for Navy destroyers. The engineers would come out with these drawings of what they wanted me to make,” he remembers. “Knowing the machines, I could tell immediately if something in the drawing was going to work – or not work. So I started thinking ‘hey, I should be creating the drawings … I should be an engineer’.”

He entered to the Mechanical Engineering Technology program at NHTI, time he recalls as the most productive and most rewarding of his academic career.

President Kilchenstein Steps Down

NHTI President Lynn Tolbert Kilchenstein stepped down from her position at the end of 2013.

Kilchenstein has been associated with NHTI since 1986, first as a teacher, the English Department Head, faculty president, and then associate vice president of academic affairs, before taking on the presidency in 2003. During her 10-year tenure, Kilchenstein oversaw historic growth at New Hampshire’s largest community college.

Among the developments at NHTI during her presidency was the completion of a three-phase expansion and upgrade of facilities for the College’s hallmark allied health programs. The College doubled the size and enrollment of its Dental Auxiliaries program with the addition of a new wing to MacRury Hall in 2009; the College opened the LEED silver-certified Beverly D. Grappone Hall, a state-of-the-art nursing education facility, in 2009; and the College completed renovation of MacRury Hall in 2010, adding state-of-the-art labs for its Diagnostic Medical Imaging, Paramedic Emergency Medicine and Natural Sciences programs.

Under Kilchenstein’s leadership the College experienced dramatic growth in its student population from 5,240 students in the 2003-4 academic year to a peak of 6,685 students served in 2010-11, a 27.5% increase. She guided the College, known locally and affectionately as “The Tech,” through a successful rebranding in 2007. Reflecting the evolution of the College to a comprehensive community college offering degree programs in a broad spectrum of technical, career and liberal arts fields, the College changed its name from “New Hampshire Technical Institute” to “NHTI, Concord’s Community College.”

Known on campus for her pleasant demeanor, open-door policy and collaborative leadership style, Kilchenstein established a reputation for ensuring student needs. She nurtured a sense of community that encouraged growth, innovation and a personal approach to student learning and service.

“It is time for me to explore some of my other interests and to participate more fully in family matters,” says Kilchenstein. “It’s an appropriate time to move on as the College enjoys numerous talented and emerging leaders; a highly creative community of teachers and staff; a relevant and rigorous academic curricula; solid enrollment and a well-deserved reputation for excellence.”

Stephen P. Caccia, who served as Vice President of Student Affairs under Kilchenstein, has been appointed Interim President while the search is underway.

Lynn was a founding member of the Red River Theatres Board, a founding member and original Co-Chair of the Somewhat North of Boston (SNOB) Film Festival, and currently serves on the Governor’s Advanced Manufacturing and Education Advisory Council, Capitol Center for the Arts Board, on the Creative Concord Committee, and on the Concord Housing Commission.

In 2011, Kilchenstein received the Pinnacle Award for Business Leader of the Year from the Greater Concord Chamber of Commerce.

police and what we called ‘Tech Vice’ showed up. We got into a bit of trouble for that one.”

Living on the NHTI campus, Chris made lifelong friends. His roommate, Mike Alessi, was the best man at his wedding to Wendy, his high school sweetheart.

After graduating from NHTI in 1988, Chris began working at Heidelberg Web Systems. He started as a level B designer using his drafting skills, and rose through the ranks at Heidelberg over a 19-year career. Chris worked as a design engineer and in product development. He traveled the globe to meet customers, diagnose and solve problems. He’s traveled all over Europe, as well as to Russia, China, Japan and Canada. He gained a valuable global perspective he relies on today.

Working at Heidelberg allowed Chris to earn his bachelor's degree from UNH in 1994, and his MBA from SNHU. He takes great pride in having 4 degrees from 4 New Hampshire schools.

Never Say Never

Only two times in his life did people say to Chris, “you will never …” Someone once told Chris that he’d never get out of the Somersworth Housing Project. He did – at age 18. The second was a professor who told him, “Chris, you’ll never be an engineer.” He is. Being told he can’t do something was a great motivator for Chris.

When a good friend told him he should apply for the position of Deputy Commissioner of the DOT, he did. “I met with then-Gov. John Lynch, and it lasted all of 15 minutes,” he laughs. “I thought ‘OK, it was a courtesy meeting, and that’s that.'” He got the job.

In 2007, he began as the Deputy Commissioner and Chief Operating Office for the DOT. He spent two years as the Director of the Office of Economic Stimulus, overseeing the disbursement of $965 million dollars in Federal funds which included $130 million for NH’s highways. Remember those highway signs? “Your Stimulus Dollars at Work!” In September 2011, Gov. Lynch and the Executive Council confirmed Chris as the Commissioner of the DOT.

Family Man at Heart

Chris and Wendy have been married nearly 25 years. They went to two high school proms together. For 23 years, Wendy has owned and managed Kennedy Gallery and Custom Framing on Market Street in Portsmouth. They have three children together: Madison attends the University of San Francisco, majoring in psychology; son Christopher, Jr. is a junior at Oyster River High School and stand-out athlete; Ben is 14 and plays basketball, soccer and the saxophone.

Commissioner of DOT is a big job with many moving parts, including advocating for funding with the NH Legislature. The political nature of the job still feels new to him.

“I go around the State, simply presenting the needs for NH’s roads and bridges,” he explains. “It’s all about transportation excellence enhancing our quality of life in NH. I call myself ‘revenue-agnostic’ … I’m not advocating for a gas tax, or a casino. We have critical needs and wherever the funding comes from … is just fine with us!”

Although his position can demand 24/7, Chris goes home to his family at the end of the day, and tries very hard to leave his work at work. And on most days, he succeeds.
NHTI Raises Record $50,000 at Winter Fling 2014!

In January, NHTI hosted its 4th Annual Winter Fling fundraiser, featuring the ever-popular “Dancing with the Concord Stars” competition! Featuring a record-breaking 14 dancing couples and a sold-out crowd, it was a night of celebration and dance. Thirteen dance teachers from four area dance schools – Concord Dance Academy, Let's Dance Studio, Miss Gen's Dance Studio, and Creative Dance Workshop of Bow – coached the couples in their routines.

Prior to the dance event, Winter Flingers enjoyed a sampling of the area’s best fare at "Concord-by-the-Bite." Please visit the restaurants that participated this year (see facing page), and thank them for their support of NHTI!

Club Soda Band warmed up those hearty partiers who couldn’t wait for the dancing to begin, and they played on after the contest, keeping the party going strong until the proverbial wee hours of the night.

Winter Fling raised $30,000 in corporate sponsorships and over $25,000 in ticket sales. Altogether, this year’s event raised over $50,000 for the President’s Fund for Excellence. The four Winter Fling events held so far have raised more than $150,000 for the fund.

New Math
A.S. Degree Supports STEM Studies

In the Fall of 2014, NHTI will launch a new 2-year Associate Degree program in Mathematics. This practically-oriented program includes a foundation in computer programming and three semesters of calculus-based physics, along with a range of general education requirements. The program will provide a solid background for just about any type of 4-year math, physics or engineering degree a student might choose to pursue.

“We went to UNH and met with their Math and Physics department heads,” says Kate Sawal, head of NHTI’s math/physics department. “As a result we created five new courses, all of which will transfer as equivalent. It was important to show them not only that our curriculum met their criteria, but that we would be able to maintain the rigor they require.” Articulation (transfer) agreements with PSU and SNHU are also in the works.

NHTI’s Math Department has nine full-time faculty and about 30 adjuncts. The College recently purchased lab equipment to support the new program, especially the calculus-based physics courses not previously offered.

The development of this new program is part of NHTI’s commitment to expanding its STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) offerings. The degree will prepare students for employment in STEM positions in industry, as well as for continued study at the baccalaureate level. Kate Sawal notes that students can take “approximately two courses for the price of one” at NHTI compared to NH universities, making NHTI an attractive alternative for students seeking to launch an academic or technical career.

But for Sawal, establishing a math major at NHTI has been a long-time goal. “I believe in the power of math,” she says. “When we teach people to think like this, to do this kind of work, we are creating problem-solvers. These are the people who are going to be able to go out and work on solving society’s problems -- maybe not with calculus, but with that kind of rigorous thinking.”

25th Anniversary Celebration Planned for The Eye
Student Journal Seeks Former Editors and Contributors

The Eye, NHTI's student literary journal, will celebrate its 25th anniversary during the next academic year with a series of special events, including parties, readings, and publication of a 25th anniversary book containing student writing from every past edition. Alumni are encouraged to reconnect with the journal and join in the upcoming festivities.

The current student editors are busy reading through all 25 editions to cull pieces of fiction, nonfiction, and poetry that speak to NHTI's students in 2014 and say much about our campus community's journey through this past quarter of a century. “It's been fascinating to read about events ranging from memories of the Challenger explosion to former students venturing into Eastern Europe after the fall of the Berlin Wall,” said current faculty advisor Prof. Paula DelBonis-Platt. “Our editors are also finding that much of the poetry is as relevant today as it was during the 1989-1999 academic year when The Eye began.”

Alternately called The Eye and the NHTEye, the journal has endured since its founding by former NHTI president Lynn Kilchenstein. Kilchenstein has been asked by the current student editors to write a reflective foreword to the 25th anniversary edition. The journal has served as a forum for academic writing, along with more creative pursuits, and it has also served as a showcase for the work of NHTI artists.

Former Eye contributors and editors are asked to contact Prof. DelBonis-Platt at pdelbonis-platt@ccsnh.edu or 603-271-6484 x4151 to be invited to the special anniversary events. We'd like to know how your experiences with The Eye influenced you and what you are doing now.

Please also feel free to "like" The Eye on Facebook at www.facebook.com/TheEyeAtNHTI or follow The Eye on Twitter at @NHTweetEye.
