

-Black History Month-

As February comes to a close we take a look back at the series of infographics created by Rhi Suarez, AmeriCorps Member highlighting the incredible societal contributions, accomplishments, and successes of Black individuals in the U.S.

Below, you will find information on just a few of the many Black writers, artists, inventors, scientists and LGBTQ+ trailblazers that were featured throughout the month.

Amanda Gorman

The youngest inaugural poet in U.S. history, Amanda Gorman, has also performed for the likes of Lin-Manuel Miranda, Malala Yousafzai, and Secretary Hillary Clinton, among others. With three books forthcoming with Penguin Random House, Gorman has also written for The New York Times and has been invited to the Obama White House on behalf of her writing.

Gordan Parks

Parks was a humanitarian who approached the lens with a focus on social justice. He served as the first AfricanAmerican staff photographer and writer for Life magazine. It was through this position that he covered photographed figures like Muhammad Ali and Malcolm X and covered topics related to race and poverty. He has been recognized with more than 50 honorary doctorates and awards including the National Medal of Arts.

Garrett Augustus Morgan, Sr.

Morgan, who only received six years of formal education and later worked to pay for his own tutor as a teen, is responsible for patenting inventions like the traffic signal and gas mask. In 1916, after a natural gas explosion in a work site beneath Lake Erie, Morgan was part of the rescue team that wore his mask invention to enter the gas-filled tunnel and save two men.

In the past, Student Senate has updated furniture in different buildings across campus, added water bottle fillers to water fountains, added adirondack chairs for seating in the quad, put new benches at the bus stops, LED sign when you come on to campus, they updated the NHTI granite sign outside of Sweeney Hall and most recently a disc golf set up and signage around campus.
